

Flight Tracking Websites

By Kay Cable
cablekay@yahoo.com

Like many of you I find myself married to a spouse who travels frequently. I find waiting for someone to arrive at a destination can be nerve racking.

I was always concerned when Greg, my husband, traveled, but 9/11 took worrying to a new level.

Thank goodness for technology! I've now gotten hooked on web sites that give flight information, including locations of aircraft in flight.

These are free sites you can use to lookup a flight. Listed below are several favorites:

<http://www.flytecomm.com/cgi-bin/trackflight>

<http://www.aeroseek.com/webtrax/>

In addition to the flight status and estimated time of arrival, you get information like ground speed, altitude and miles from departure and to the destination. The first site I list has a map that you can actually track the flight.

Trips to foreign countries can be worrisome, especially when there are delays and your spouse can't call to let you know.

Recently a 2 hour delay returning from Japan turned into an 8 hour delay. I was able to see when the flight finally left and the latest ETA, all via these web pages.

Meals on Wheels

By Michelle Wilson
547-126

A group of women from Beacon Knoll have been delivering Meals on Wheels on Thursdays for several years. I joined them about four years ago. Due to some women returning back to work or going back to school, we now find ourselves a little short on volunteers.

Meals-on-wheels is a great way to get to know some of your neighbors and serve the community without taking over your life. It takes only one hour once a month.

We are paired up in groups of two; one driver and one delivery person. There is always veteran with a new person, so you don't have to worry about knowing the route.

We pick up our meals at Unity Presbyterian in Fort Mill at 11:00 then deliver to a couple of homes over by Duke Power's office and then three more in Avery Place Apartments. Most of the rest are in the Heritage Development. I'm usually home by 12:15.

We are all scheduled to only one Thursday per month so it is not too big an obligation. Anna Marriott does the scheduling and always works around your vacations and other obligations. You can always switch days with someone within the group if something comes up at the last minute.

Please consider joining us in this much needed community service. Other Beacon Knoll women in this group are Kate Agrawal, Diane Dasher, Gail Cote, Barb Pringle, Joy Smith, Gayle Baloga and Karen Gilmore. For more information please call me (Michelle Wilson) at 547-1261 or Anna Marriott at 548-6055.

Construction is progressing on the site at the corner of Bailiwyck Green Blvd. and South Downs Way.

Committee Updates

Clubhouse:

The Clubhouse Committee is looking for either additional committee members, or alternatively, one or two volunteers who, while not wishing to commit to being a committee member, would be willing to assist from time to time with minor maintenance tasks, and with supervising outside contractors when necessary. If you are able to help, please contact Walt Lawson at 548-1012.

Recreation:

The Recreation Committee will have its first meeting of 2004 Tuesday, March 23th at 7:30pm at the clubhouse. If you are interested in helping administer the recreation facilities (pool/tennis courts/playground) please join us, or contact Ed Reuille at 547-6559.

Treats for Those Who Wander Outside Late at Night

Peter Tkacik
(803) 548-5180, or ptkacik@caraustar.com

It seems that although it has been cold at night to the point of runny noses, my sense of smell becomes heightened. My dog of course lives in a five dimensional world (x, y, z, time, and smell) and he cruises nose down during our walks, occasionally risking decapitation by choker chain to get a great whiff of some critically important message in the grass.

But last night, oh last night, I became enthralled in olfactory voyeurism. It started out with what was most definitely a roast beef, mashed potatoes, and asparagus cloud; correction, not roast beef but grilled steak. It took masterful restraint not to march upwind to the unguarded house, charge in, and take possession of the prize. Yeesh.

Roy seemed only interested in a dog message in the grass.

Later, in an international whirlwind, the same thing happened. This time it was a dish from India, (the great subcontinent, not native Americans). To the point, I estimate that the rice was cooked with Curry (from around Mumbai maybe) and was served with Ginger, Garlic, Cumin powder, and Jeera. A dish to be eaten with the fingers and amongst friends. The image of the meal is blurry but I get of a sense of place and mentally travelled to a place smoky, warm, humid and with bright sun.

Roy seemed only interested in a new spot of grass.

The Haunting Moon

Peter Tkacik
(803) 548-5180, or ptkacik@caraustar.com

The other night was starry but also foggy. The light was dim and everything was quiet until I walked around a low bend in the road with some pines up ahead. A ghostly waif appeared moving through the trees, creeping amongst the branches.

With the blurriness of the fog there were no details to be seen; but in the branches, silhouetting the dull cream colored moon, complex visual details exploded. Even at a hundred yards, every pine needle was distinctive.

A roosting bird (a Mourning Dove maybe) could be seen hidden away. And as the walk progressed and the moon moved around, the intensity of details moved with it. Hazy branches crackled with features as the Lunar light passed by.

Further down and walking along the field at the Lower Wye, the moon again cruised the treetops. Details explode and vanished in a visual extravaganza not unlike the ending to a long fireworks display. But rather than a barrage of color, sound, and intensity, it reverberated a deep space scene from the movie '2001: A Space Odyssey' with its complexity of detail and utter silence.

Just then, a distant dog started howling.
